PROTECT HAWAII'1 AGAINST CRUISE SHIP POLLUTION. BE THE EYES OF THE OCEAN.

It all adds up to the on-going degradations of our beaches, fishing grounds, surf sites, coral reefs, and threats to marine life. But by reporting abuses by the cruise industry you add your voice to the growing number calling for accountability and for strong protections for Hawaii's waters.

Cruise Ships By the Numbers

1 pound of food waste generated by a single passenger daily, dumped at sea

2 pounds of glass and metal generated by a single passenger daily, dumped at sea

2 pounds of burnable waste, including plastic, per passenger incinerated daily

10 gallons of sewage generated by a single cruise ship passenger in one day

100 gallons of waste water generated by a single passenger daily, dumped at sea

3,000 average number of passengers on a cruise ship

210,000 gallons of sewage generated during a one-week voyage, dumped at sea

Be the Eyes of the Ocean

Surfers, paddlers, swimmers, divers, kayakers, fishers, cruise ship passengers—those of you who enjoy and care about our Ocean:

We are gathering informal documentation on the ways our ocean is being impacted by cruise ships.

- Have you seen trash, oil slicks or human waste in the ocean that you think may be associated with cruise ships?
- Have you witnessed an incident of trash being dumped overboard or effluent being released from a cruise ship?

If you have witnessed trash or ocean dumping that you feel might be associated with cruise ships, please fill out the form below. We are collecting anecdotal information to determine if there is a pattern of ocean impacts that will help convince legislators of the need for regulations.

If you have witnessed suspicious garbage in the water and there is an indication that the garbage or oil is related to cruise ship activity, please take the time to fill out the following form. Help save Hawai'i's marine environment today.

Individuals whose documentation of dumping leads to fines against a cruise line may be eligible to receive half of any fine that is levied under the Act to Prevent Pollution from Ships. In one case, passengers videotaped plastic bags being dumped overboard. This crucial evidence led to criminal charges against the cruise line and the passengers who provided the videotape shared the $250,000 fine.
